Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 18.—An effort is being made here by interes of the Home for Homeless Boys, of the Home for Homeless Boys, in Alleghany County, to arrange for a reunion of two boys and a girl, brothers and sister. The children are orphans of a late rector of the Church of England, who held a parish in this State, and his late wife. The rector died not many months ago, and his wife died a short time ago in a State institution. Now the boys are wards of the Alleghany County Home and the girl, who is partially blind, is being educated at the Staunton School for Deaf, Dumb and Blind.

M. Minor Davis, chairman of the home board, has asked Lynchburg interests to see that the children get together for a vacation, and it seems certain that this will be arranged.

WASHINGTON'S GROWTH.

Stock taking, being an honest confession, is good for the soul. A comprehensive analysis of past achievements gives fresh incentive for future undertakings, especially if the inventory shows marked progress. It is with a feeling of satisfaction that Washingtonians contemplate the third annual survey of the commercial, financial and municipal activities of the National Capital put out by the Washington Board of Trade. The report is ably compiled and is an index of remarkable growth, worthy of the attention of every citizen.

The survey estimates the population of Washington at 564,000, but the population of the suburbs in Virginia and Maryland brings the total of Greater Washington to 700,000. The normal increase is 12,000 per year. Housing is keeping well ahead of population. Fiftyeight apartment buildings and 1,259 homes erected in 1928 provided for 25,-000 persons. During the last five years there has been sufficient residential construction to house 130,000 persons, which is equivalent to the population of Nashville, Albany, or Des Moines. The city spent $51,255,000 on new buildings last year, exclusive of the $75,000,000 building program of the Government. Property values in the District for taxation purposes have reached the grand total of $1,816,669,457.

Approximately 300,000 workers are employed. During the World War the population was swelled by an influx of Government workers. Since that time the number of Federal employes here has been reduced from 117,760 to 62,-140, yet the total number of workers in the District continues to grow. At present the employes of both the District and Federal Governments comprise only one-fourth of this city's workers. Fifty-five thousand persons are engaged in manufacturing, 29,000 in transportation, and 27,000 each in trades and public service. The city has 30,000 professional men and women.

Reports from the seven leading department stores, which did a business of $42,617,000 last year, indicate a healthy gain. The Capital is not generally known as an industrial city, yet its 500 manufacturing plants turned out finished products valued at more than $90,000,000 last year. Washington is well served by public utilities and is a center for eight steam railway lines. Banks in Washington have assets of $331,797,000.

The city is the most popular tourist center in the East, and is therefore well supplied with transportation facilities. More than 135 buses arrive daily, and the city is connected with all major air routes of the country. There is approximately one automobile for every three persons in the District, compared with one for every five persons in the country as a whole. Washington has splendid hotels. Additional prestige comes from the fact that 400 great national organizations maintain headquarters here. The city has more beautiful parks than can be found in any other American city, and is an educational center with six universities, twelve colleges, thirteen women's seminaries and numerous other schools, as well as 200 libraries. The progress of Washington during the last few years has been phenomenal. Its importance in the life of the Nation Is increased from year to year. Few American cities are developing at a more rapid rate. The inventory of the

that will be astonishing even to old residents of the District who have watched the city grow.

TRUE AIM OF FARM RELIEF.

"If the men on the Federal Farm Board, with their combined experience and the money at their command can not do something toward a solution of the farm problem." said former Secretary of Agriculture Jardine in a speech delivered before the Institute of Public Affairs, "then no one can." He echoed the sentiment of the country. A strong, intelligent and capable board has been chosen to administer the agricultural relief act, and it has started its labors, carefully and logically. The undertaking, however, has had no counterpart, and it remains to be seen whether even the able Farm Board, with the enormous fund at its command, will succeed in the experiment looking toward farm relief. The public, rural and rban, waits to be shown.

Mr. Jardine asserts that the trouble with griculture is that it is the only industry that has paid little, if any, attention to market-"For years," he said, "the Government ing. has been teaching farmers how to produce more efficiently, and they are now producing so efficiently that overproduction is resulting despite the fact that fewer acres are under cultivation and there are 15,000,000 more nouths to feed. At the same time, there are oo many farmers and too many acres of land producing altogether too little to make farming profitable. We want fewer and larger farms that can profitably be cultivated and farmed with modern machinery capable of handling these large areas efficiently."

Doubtless agriculture as an industry would be better off if it were organized on a big business, mass-production basis. But that is not the idea of farm relief, nor is it considered desirable from the social standpoint The farm is a social unit. Its individuality should be preserved, and the farm relief project was conceived not to develop farming as a big business, but to assist in the preservation of the family-farm unit. That is the reason why "cooperation" has been Only through development of the cooperative movement can the family-farm unit be preserved and the benefits of organized marketing secured

It is evident, says the former Secretary of Agriculture, that the consumer is paying about all he can afford for meats, vegetables and fruits; yet a large number of farmers are going broke. "Part of the reason lies in the fact that the farmer's costs of production are too high," he adds, "but until a more efficient and less wasteful system of marketing is developed the same condition will persist. Today, out of the consumer's dollar, the farmer receives, on an average, one-third." Cooperative marketing should enable the farmer to obtain a greater share of the purchaser's dollar. The chief danger that must be guarded against when, through cooperative action, the farmer is enabled to btain greater return from his investment and labor, is the tendency to increase acreage. The farmer must be brought to realize. through his cooperative, that like any other business man he must adjust production to

WAR ON FINANCIAL CROOKS.

The campaign against bucketshop operators, stock tipsters and publishers of fake financial journals, undertaken by Assistant United States Attorney Mintzer, of New York City, is of interest to the entire country. If Mr. Mintzer should succeed in his campaign, he will have destroyed those who prey on anwary, gullible investors in every State in the

Since the campaign was begun some weeks ago Mr. Mintzer has received complaints against 380 firms. Numerous arrests have been made and hundreds of cases of dishonest dealing have been uncovered. In some cases, and simple, where no attempt is made to purchase or deliver securities. In other cases worthless "securities" have been sold and a market for them artificially created. The latter system is the more popular among dishonest dealers. They buy stock at low prices, raise the price by creating a demand through telephone solicitation, fake financial sheets and correspondence, and sell it at three or four times the purchase price. The "in vestor" is left holding the bag.

The campaign against bucketshops and tipsters has a three-fold objective. Primarily Mr. Mintzer seeks to jail the crooks. He hopes also to enlighten the public so that potential victims may avoid the pitfalls of poor investments, and he hopes to promote legislation providing for the control of stock issues. It is to be hoped that all objectives will be attained.

COUNTRY-MADE CRIME.

Crime problems are invariably connected with the large cities, and any suggestion that the National Law Enforcement Commission which just now holds the center of the stage in the anticrime fight, should go probing about the peaceful countryside for the roo of the evil seems fanciful to most people. Yet that theory has been injected into the Insti tute of Public Affairs by not one but several speakers. They raise the question whether America is to become a land of Christian cities and pagan countryside.

Dr. Henry W. McLaughlin, national director of the country church department of the Presbyterian Church, concludes that cities with their up-to-date schools and churches don't breed much crime. He believes that boys from poverty-stricken rural homes, who have had little schooling and less religious training, are responsible for a great deal nore crime than is generally attributed to The lads rush to the city and break morally under the greater temptations. As result, he says, the cities with the highest homicide rate are those in the centers of great farming areas. The discussion indiates that the farm retains little of its former reputation as a source of able bodies and strong characters. The outstanding reason given for this con dition is the decline of rural churches and schools. The best teachers and the best ministers are attracted to the city, and the Board of Trade reveals achievements country gets what is left. Dr. Edgar W. need for Knight, of the University of North Carolina, mated the number of old-fashioned, insanitary, one-teacher schools at 160,000. More than 4,000,000 school children are huddled in these miserable buildings, which have little or no facilities for the protection of health or morals. The relatively low standing of rural teachers was also scored.

The close relationship between poverty illiteracy and crime has long been recognized. The inadequacy of schools, recreational facilities, churches and organized groups of young people in most rural sections has also been well understood. But seldom has this condition been looked upon as the reason why underworlds in America's crime-infested cities flourish. This analysis, like many others on the same subject, probably contains only a grain of truth. Nevertheless, it furnishes crusaders against crime something to think about.

PARKING IN F STREET.

Traffic Director Harland recommends that there be a permanent parking ban on the south side of F street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. The recommendation will come in for a great deal of criticism, most of it based on the assumption that it marks the initial movement looking toward suppression of parking in the whole downtown area. Possibly it does. While the elimination of parking in the downtown area should be postponed as long as possible, there can be no doubt that sooner or later the District will have to follow other cities in limiting parking in the congested zones.

With automobile ownership constantly expanding, some way must be found to insure motor circulation. There are three possible colutions. One lies in speeding up movement, so that a given street area will carry a greater volume of traffic. Another lies in prohibiting parking, so that two additional lanes for moving traffic will be made available. The third lies in widening streets: but this relief can not be expected in the built-up, congested areas of the city. The only prac ticable methods whereby traffic can be kept fairly mobile in Washington's congested area is by speeding up and by prohibiting park

Conditions in F street between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets are intolerable, and have been for many months. Traffic enter ing from Thirteenth or Fourteenth street is usually halted before it reaches the middle of the block, although much of that section is already closed to parking. If the traffic director is satisfied that entire prohibition of parking will serve to relieve the congestion in that part of F street he should be sup ported in putting the ban into effect.

BRIGHTER PARACHUTES

From the London Times

The monotony of falling has been broken before now, but seldom so sensibly as by an American parachutist who has fitted the vireless to his parachute. Last week he beguiled the tedium of a 10,000-foot drop by holding a wireless conversation with his friends below. In a few weeks the perform ance is to be repeated and broadcast, and this should undoubtedly help the public to ecome what up-to-date salesmen would call parachute conscious. For it can not be gainsaid that the parachute side of flying has received less attention than its other aspects. The insides of air liners continue to be improved, so that the passenger who sits looking through the illustrated papers might be in any of the places in which such papers are commonly read. The sky does not come into the question at all. In time, no doubt there will come a superparachute, which, in opening, will drape itself as a private narquee about the falling body and enable the comfortable perusal of the papers to go on as before. Till invention has progressed, nowever, gadgets like the wireless offer the best relief from the sameness of the sky.

A recent meeting of the National Terra Cotta Society of America was the occasion for some cheering news for fliers and para chutists. They will soon see much prettier patterns on the earth, for the president of the society has announced that skyscrapers are soon to be made of all colors-yellow. green, navy blue and coral pink. Cities seen from above will then look like modernist art, and this should do much to stimulate civil aviation. But the sky is so vast that, if human beings really think of spending much time there, thought should be given to its own decoration-for surroundings influ-

It is already possible to discern a conflict of interest between those who think of the sky as something to be looked at from the earth and those to whom it is the landscape on either side of the road they travel. Mr Justice Astbury was speaking for the earth the other day when he deplored that adverisements, after making the land hideous now proposed to uglify the sky; and, no doubt, to the earthbound it becomes more and more urgent to keep the sky clear as the earth becomes more and more crowded with advertisements. To fliers, on the other hand, even an ad vertisement would be welcome as a diversion. Fortunately, the size of the sky makes it possible to satisfy both parties. Advertise ment balloons, sky writing, inflated rubber pigs and the rest may all be permitted with out offense, provided they do not use that part of the sky which can be seen from the With that proviso, it will be all to the good to have as much entertainment as possible going on in the higher ether and the seventh heaven. The whole of Lindamann's region—the belt of sky from five to twenty miles above the earth's surface—is crying out for an improving hand. To fix round the earth will so soon be a demoded form of honeymoon that there is a crying need for some alternative excursions in

N a mining town of the West, where men lived in tents or crude cabins, there was an unshorn individual named Wild Bill. He was neither better nor worse than his neighbors, but his claim was the richest and his sack of gold dust the largest in the comnunity, and these advantages made him a topic of conversation Riches are not an unmixed blessing, however, and Wild Bill worried by day and slept ill o'nights. "I've got too much dust to be taking chances," he said to himself. 'I ought to have a weapon. Some of these tough guys might beat me up and rob me.' So Wild Bill bought a knife and carried it in a leather scabbard at his belt. The other miners noticed the knife at once and said to one another "What has got into Wild Bill? He must be looking for trouble You have to watch a guy like that."

Watch him they did. Moreover, they bought knives for themselves. And every man went about his work with seven inches of steel always within reach.

The next move was up to Wild Bill.

"I'm no better off than I was," he murmured.

"One of these bad eggs could slit my throat before I could say Jack bison. What I need is something that will do business at a discent too high now—in a letter to The Robison. And then Wild Bill began to carry two.

The nation that makes mighty weapons with which to defend itself at once arouses the suspicion and fear of all others and they make similar weapons to defend themselves. It is a vicious circle that benefits nobody, burdens the taxpayers,

Russia Vote Against Diplo

To the Editor of The Post-Bir: Priends of the Soviet regime in Russia have staked great hopes on the findings of the party of b een touring the U.S.S.R. for the last month. Inasmuch as the tour was arranged by the Russian-American Chamber of Commerce, it was presumed that only friends of the oviet were included in the party.

The Soviet government and com-mercial interests lost no chance of making a favorable impression on the royal style at Moscow. The friendli-ness of Russian commercial interest was manifest in banquets, extended ours and welcor can firms were held out, and Soviet officials discussed at length the rea-sons why the United States should welcome the communistic republic into the family of nations. American visitors certainly saw the what result?

The delegation has now arrived in Warsaw, en route home. One of the first things done after crossing the border into Poland was to vote on the advisability of recognizing the Stalin' government. An Associated Press dispatch reports that only one-third of the visitors was in favor of oviet Union and the United States. Many of those who favored recogni-tion attached qualifications to their votes. For example, 83 per cent of them insisted on indemnity for American property confiscated during manded guarantees against munistic propaganda in the United States. Fifty per cent made payment of debts of the imperial regime a condition of recognition, and two-thirds thought negotiations should not be undertaken until the existing re is ready to fund the debts of the Kerensky government.

This le of unqualified recognition negligible. Extension of trade relations with ussia received more favorable consideration, yet only 43 per cent of that country to be a safe outlet for American capital. Fifty per cent beleved that investments would be safe if the Soviets were recognized, and vestments unsafe under any conditions. With this kind of report ing from business men who have made personal investigations it is not likely that American financiers will flood the U. S. S. R. with capital.

Police Believe Stock Fraud Was Motive for Attempt on Oil Man's Life.

Officers contend that Collins' signature to the order for stock was forged and they said Saturday that a charge of forgery probably would be filed against Hyde tomorrow.

Hyde was arraigned Saturday on a charge that he attempted to kill Collins by placing poison in a soft drink which he ordered sent to the oil man's office. Collins was near death for several-hours from the effects of the poison, and during this time the New York broker ordered his Tulsa representative to get in touch with Collins and confirm the order for oil stock, which directed delivery of the shares to Hyde's post-office box.

Hyde confirmed the order, officers

The night before the stock was scheduled to arrive in Ponca City, officers say Hyde made another attempt on Collins' life. They were tipped off that he intended to kidnap Collins, kill him and dispose of his body, and Thursday night the police set a trap in which Collins,

The circumstances were all against that the evidence was against him.

But there was one who accepted his Children born on This August 19 will be inclined to go to extremes in air things. They will act on the impulse of the moment, often to their regret. Pride and love of power till be their dominating qualities.

You are a day dreamer, from which source you obtain considerable conjeyment, but very few profits. You are spoiling your calculating mackine—your mind filts from one passing fancy to another until your brain is cluttered up with innumerable unfails detered up with innumerable unfails dever your failure to get it. It is hard for you to get down to clear and concise thinking without going off at a tangent to the principal thought.

You are seldom willing to take people as you find them, but must mentally make them over to fit a more abectacular role. You are disappointed when they prove to be misfits, and you see them as plain John or Mary.

You are truly artistic, very original and have eccentric tastes. Phere is no question that you could capitalize these traits to good advantage, if you only knew how You are not supple, but very unpractical.

WORK'S BRIDGE

Bridge Brevities, a pamphlet, by Mitton C. Work, the world's preeminent authority on Auction and Contract bridge, free.

This valuable pamphlet, containing concise suggestions for players of both games, will be sent with the compliments of this paper to readers of Mr. Work's articles who request it.

Requests must be addressed to Milton C. Work, care of this paper, and must include a stamped (2c stamp) self addressed return envelope.

This article is intended for the Bridge novice.)

THE Auction Bridge player who has not had extensive experience is apt to be puzzled when, holding a strong major two-suiter, he finds himself the partner of a player who has bid No Trump.
Suppose South should bid one No Trump. West should pass, and North should have some such hand produce game at the major which fits better with the No Trump hand and probably will produce game at either major; it may be that South is strong in both minors and that game is there at the No Trump; but why not find out which is the best declaration for the combined hands? If North's hand were held by a player who was making the opening bid, he would bid one Spade first and subsequently, if the opportunity offered, bid Hearts to give his partner a choice between the two and an opportunity to register that choice by passing if he preferred Hearts, by bidding Spades if he preferred Spades—in neither case increasing the size of the contract. But in this case, partner having bid No Trump, there is more probability that North's first bid will stand, and it is advisable to have it in North's stronger suit. Therefore North should bid stronger Hearts.

If Shuth does not like the Heart Secretary of the second properties of the se

Trump bid would show that South's one weak suit was Hearts; and in that event North could bid three Spades with the absolute assurance that it will fit with South's hand and that South can not possibly prefer Hearts to Spades. So there is no reason for the partner of a no trumper to name first the higher-valued of his two major suits, and every reason that he should name first the stronger regardless of whether it be the higher-valued or the lower.

The Spanish influence!

As we have so often told you, the models treated by the Haute Couture of Paris do not come out of thin air, or from the fantases of a mad creator, but are an accurate and sensitive expression of that which passes in the world of art, literature, politics and economics.

All of which is much too lengthy to discuss here on a warm afternoon—an 800-page volume would fall far short of covesing that particular subject in all its subtleties and complexities—but serves as a preamble to justify and explain our prediction in that you will see a touch of the Spanish influence in the fall mode and perhaps a great deal in the twinter mode.

The reason (and styles always do the have a reason, whatever Friend Husband may think to the contrary) is simply the Barcelons Exposition. As this is being written, All-Paris (to translate literally the French phrase designating thouse Parisians who count) has either been to Barcelona and Seville, or is planning to go as a side trip on its summer jaunting.

And since all the principal creators of the mode, and their best customers, will attend the 'exposition, they will greater than the 'exposition, they will greater than the result can not fall to be reflected abarply in the mode. As a matter of fact, Agnes is already show—

Life in the Old Stone Age.

I—DISCOVERY OF FIRE.

This week I am going to take you on a long trip—back to the time when people in Europe were living in what we call the Old Stone Age.

Set forests after from the earliest times there were forests. Many forest fires nowadays are started by lightning.

We may fancy that the early people were afraid of forest fires, running away as if from some giant dragon which beliched smoke and fisme, and which "ate up" trees.

Stone Age People Running From Forest Fire.

The Stone Age goes far back in time. No one knows just how far back, but scientists believe that men began to use tools of atone at least 200,000 years ago.

Europe was then a very different place. All sorts of flere animals roamed around—tigers, lions, bears and mammoths.

There must have been a time when people did not know the use of fire. Yet nature has always known how to make her own fire. Volcances have poured fortif moiten lave for untold ages. Lightning has

It is a congenital condition. No cause is known. In the development of the child the lips form from several islands or buds. The plans and apecifications call for fusion of some of these islands. If they fail to fuse, the result is harelip. Which is a redital of fact, but not an explanation of a failure of schedule.

Yet men are curious, and we may picture Stone Age people resurning to the scene of a forest fire and picking up burning sticks. Perhaps the flame burned the point where one of the men held his stick; Then he would be sure to let it fail. If it happened to fall in the midst of dry grass, it would set the grass affire.

In some such way, people of the Stone Age must have learned the nature and power of fire. From ashes left in their cave homes, we know that they built fires from time to time. Most of the ashes were left near the mouths of the caves. Fire at the cave entrance served to keep wild beasts from coming too near; for beasts of the forest fear flame.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.

Perce Malone, speed ball master from Chicago, revived memories of twenty years ago at the Polo Grounds soday when he engaged Larry Benton, of the Giants in a duel which saw the two pitcher's almost completely master each other's supporting cast. It might have been Brown against Matty, or Pfeister against Ames, from the way Malone and Benton wove their spell with a 1929 jackrabbit ball.

Malone was the victor by 1 to 0, and the Cubs edged half a game further from the pursuing Pirates, who idled in Philadelphia. The break came in the seventh, when Kiki Cuyler opened with a double and completed the journey on sacrifice files by Stephenson and Heathcote.

R. Grubb, Ehlers and Elliott hurled for Silver Spring in the two games against R. Davidson, Stubbs and Milburn.

Duffy started on the mound for the Takoma lads in the nightcap and was knocked out in the second inning, from which time, Heaton Skinner hurled excellent relief ball while the Tigers came from behind to win. Wilson, Henley and Powell did some heavy clouting in this encounter with four hits fach.

SPIRITED battles, both figuratively and 1 rally speaking, broke out along the unlimited line of the Capital City League yesterday. When the dust of battle had cleared the Dirie Pig, St. Joseph A. By defeating the Hawks, the Ed-monds team shook the cellar berth in favor of the Tremonts. The Col-lege Park team hammered the slants of Francis unmercifully and never left any doubt as to the final out-come.

The cast, which includes Joan Bennett, as the niece: Lawrence Grant, the demoniacal doctor; Montagu Love, as the ostensible chief of the kidnapers; and Charles Selion, as Travers, are generally well chosen and read their lines sufficiently well. "he most convincing rote, next to that of the star, who gains immensely by being heard, is that by Lilyan Tashman, as the brains of the gang, who carries her part excellently.

Unusual actings, devised by W. C. Menzies, and odd camera angles add to the bizarre effects of many acenes.

O'Hara. The kindly landowner, the bullying overseer, the pipe-loving grandmother, the pugnacious old clowns, are all familiar figures. There is fun in them yet. Those who insist will also find what are probably veritable glimpses of Irish wavs in the director's settings of farmyards and byways and of the crowded fair of County Kerry.

For swift contrast there are scenas in New York, where Rory O'Moore, the young lover, played by James Hall, goes to seek his fortune with his fiddle and his love song that he made himself. But it was Kathleen that made the words, and when she made himself. But it was Kathleen that made the words, and when ahe follows and finds Rorg singing their own "Smiling Irish Eyes" to his Swedish stage partner there is misery to be cleared away. Picture the green little Irish maid in her first encounter with Broadway traffic, seeing in a store window her own love ditty displayed as the hit of the day. That would be an exective bit in a more serious story, one that was not built up out of these easy absurdities.

a more serious story, one that was not built up out of these easy absurdities.

In one admirer's opinion Colleen Moore has a delicacy of expression that is wasted on tills sort of trifle. One would like to have her transported for a while to the Ireland of Yeats and Dunsany. Or perhaps it should have been done in the beginning, if at all, for her film training in the obvious might prove to have spofled her for that faery atmosphere.

There are pienty of bright lines and amusing turns of event in the film, and Aloysius, the pig, is the brightest of comadians. Irish brogue goes well through the screen and is easily followed. There is no doubthat the Colleen does her own singing, but the same is not to be asid for James Hall, who alipped by grinning widely on a broad A. He is the folme lover for all that, and there is good acting on all sides.

There are two short Vitaphone reels, one of a jazz outfit in which only the saxophones are audible and they are no excuse, the other made tolerable by some college-boy "nut" stuff that is funny. There is a good news reel.
